A conversation to remember.

Maasai Conversation Card

Bring your curiosity. Listen to individual voices. Leave room for the unexpected.

Maasai beadwork, Tanzania. Maryam Mgonja / CC BY-SA 4.0, photographed 2015. Resized and cropped display; adaptation retains the same licence. Original photo. Craft illustration, not a confirmed workshop.

Your Three Questions

Use these ideas or write your own. David agrees the focus with the hosts before booking; nobody has to answer a personal question or offer a demonstration.

01 / Stories and everyday life

What would you like visitors to understand about life here today?

My question

02 / Skills and design

What would you like to tell us about how this object is made or used?

My question

03 / Land and changing seasons

How does a change of season affect daily life in this area?

My question

A two-way exchange

If your hosts welcome it, share a small story or photograph from your own home. Ask what they would enjoy hearing about. Take notes about ideas, not private family details.

What I take home.

A few personal reflections from the visit you actually experienced. These notes stay with you; the PDF does not send anything to David or the hosts.

Visit date

Confirmed venue

A story or perspective I learned

What did a particular person choose to share? Avoid turning one answer into a claim about every Maasai community.

My reflection

A detail I noticed

An object, a skill, a sound or something in the landscape. What question helped me understand it?

My reflection

Something I shared

What did I offer to the conversation, if invited? What did we discover in common?

My reflection

A question I will keep exploring

What would I like to understand better after today?

My reflection

Visit as a welcome guest

Ask before photographing or recording people, and ask separately before sharing recognisable portraits. Respect a refusal. Craft purchases and tips are optional; agreed host and guiding fees are payment for time and work. Follow your guide and leave no litter.

Your named venue, programme, access, meals and charges are confirmed in the written itinerary. For the current plan: davidexplora.com/maasai-community-day.